

The next morning, Craig was up early.
He ran to the shed and opened the door.

The robot dog's eyes were glowing red.

Suddenly, it raced out of the shed.
It whizzed through Craig's legs and darted around the garden.

It knocked over the rubbish bin.
It zoomed around Grandad's vegetable patch, flattening most of the plants.

Then it chased the neighbours' cat,
making it screech and spit.

Finally, it crashed through the fence and disappeared down the street.

Craig was stunned.

“What just happened?” He whispered.